NEWPORT,

BY CRANSTON & NORMAN 127 THAMES STREET.

SATURDAY MORN'G AUG. 2, 1-51. ET The German and give their third grand Concert at Bellevue Half this evering; their Programme is the richcer which has yet been offered, and we shall expect to see a very large audience. The town is now full of visitors, and aming them we are confident that there are activities of music enough to fill the Hall on this occasion. Our correspondent "The Spy at the Ocean House," informs us that he shall probably take entire notes of the appearance of the belies on the occasion, their styles of dress, &c., for his next Zephyr. This, of course, will have a tendency to bring the helics out, in their most dashing array, as there is always a slight spirit of rivalry among them.

All things considered, we anticipate a arger audience this evening, of beauty and fashion than has yet been witnessed at either of the previous Concerts by this Society. Among other delightful things to be performed, this evening it will be seen that that exqueite piece, "Sounds from Home," is included.

UFDr. Crane delivered a lecture on the Science of Phronology, at Bellevue Hall, on Thursday evening, to a large audience; we were unable to be present, but we learn from those who were there that the lecture was exceedingly interesting, and that the examination of heads was very entisfactory. Dr. Crane will deliver another lecture Monday evening, at Bellevue Hall, on the same subject. We hope to see a full ICP Persons wishing Bouquets cun be furnished by applying to T. Galvin & Son, at the south part of Spring street, a few steps from the Ocean House. Their grounds are now in perfect order, and are well worth visiting .-They contain a very large variety of all kinds of heautiful flowers, some of which are very rare. Bouquets of any size are prepared to order, and at the shorteat notice, by them.

A Grand Dramatic Jubilee in honor of E. A. Marshall, Esq, the manager of the Broadway Theatre, New York, will take place early in August. The entire of New York and Philadelphia, have relunteered their services for the occusion. The benefit will take place at Castle Garden, early in August. We are indebted to the managers for the courtery of sending us tickets.

Strepping Flowers.-Almost all flow ers sleep during the night. The mari gold goes to bed with the sun, and with him tises weeping. Many plants are so sensitive that their leaves close during the passage of a cloud. The daude hon opens at five or six in the morning, and shuts at nine in the evening. The goat's heard' wakes at three in the morning, and shuts at five or six in the lafternoon. The common daisy shuts up its blosson in the evening, and opens its 'day's eye' to meet the early beams of the morning sun. The crocus, tulip, and many others, close their biassoms at different hours towards evening. The jvyleaved lettuce opens at eight in the morning, and closes forever at four in the afternoon.

The night flowering ceres turns night into day. It begins to expend its magnificent, sweet-scented bleesoms in the twilight, it is full blown at midnight, and closes never to open again, with the dawn of day. In a clover field not a kaf opens until after sonried!

So says a celebrated English author who has devoted much time to the study of plants, and often watched them during their quiet slombers. These plant which seem to be awake all might, he styles the bats and owls of the vegetable kingdem.

The N. Y. Evening Post Rills: good story of a minister who get quite het in a warm Sunday. He entered the pulpit and addressed the audience as follows, as he wiped the perspiration from his face:

" this is a damned het morning?" The congregation stared and wonders; ed-tot finally their good paster went on ofter familing himself with the hymn-

brok, and concluded as follows:

Ocean House, Aug. 1, 1851. Ach and, my last Zephyr to you from this realm of fashion and pleasure, luxmry and splendor, beauty, accomplishment and intellect, created a most intense excitement. I have witnessed all manner of somes here, and have been a quiet observer of all varieties of whirlwinds,-but the scene here Wednesday morning atterly baffles description; in fact, there was not a culm until all had retired at night, and consigned themcelves to the balmy embrace of Murphons, the fascinating god who fulls the agitated soil, and deprives it, for the time-being, alike of its pleasure and its

You Carrier arrived here about breakfast time. Col. Munroe, of the Baltimore Patriot, was the first person to obtain the News, and make the discovery that it contained a letter in regard to the House. The announcement was made, and extracts were read. Oh, the seene that ensued. Krach! The ladies jumped from the tables and despatched the servants in all directions for copies of the Daily News. It was not long before fifty papers were obtained, and they were seen in the hands of all who could get them. Here would be a group of a dozen, surrounding a ludy who was reading aloud; the most positive silence reigned for a tew seconds during the reading of the part relative to one of the Germanians being in love. Then there was a shout which made the whole house ring from attic to basement,-with exclamations of "Oh, who is he, who in the world does he love ?" "Ah, I know," said another, "it is Miss ----, I have suspected it for some days, for I have noticed him watching her very closely, both while promonading and waltzing." "Oh no," said a third, "it is not her, I am confident, but it is Miss ----, for I saw him hand her a little note vesterday, and she ran away to a quiet corners and nerused its contents with evident delight." "But who is the Germanian who has lost his heart," shouted out the merry and fascinating Missof New York. "Oh, ---," said a lively creature, "you know well enough who it is."

Then the reading went on again, and then there was another shout which was loud enough almost to wake the dead. as my opinion was given as to the belle. I was in the midst of a group, and could hardly sufficiently control my risibililies and other evictions the sundy timiles which lit up many a countenance that morning I Bright and sparkling eyes floated wildly and deliciously around, like diamonds of the purest lustre in ambrosial streams. Pallid checks were crimsoned by tints as delicate and beautiful as Aurera ever pencilled in the Eastern sky; and ruby lips were widely parted, exhibiting teeth of the most pearly whiteness.

I will venture to say that there was not a guest at this house who did not read the News that morning; and in this connection I beg of you to send at least two hundred papers whenever a letter is published, for that number will hardly supply the demand.

There has been any quantity of surmising as to the authorship of the letter, but as yet all is enveloped in Stygian darkness, and no one has even remotely suspected me. The fadies have conversed with me about it, and asked my opinion very freely as to who I suppose the author to be; hereafter I shall refer all enquiring ones to you. And I now say to you that if the ladies of the house will hold a meeting and manimously decide who is the belle, and then give her a certificate to that effect, you are at liberty to give her my name, whenever she presents such an evidence of belleship to you. Is not this a liberal offer! Krach!

Since my fast there have been arrivals of a number of beautiful young ladies who are destined to create a sensation among the crowd at the Occan. There are also some who have been here for a week or two whom I should like to speak of, and who are deserving of a place in my Zephyrs,-but I do not know their names, and dare not make many direct enquiries, lest my object should be suspected. Such shrowd utlerts are being made to find me out, merely to gratify curiosity, of which you know the ladies only have a rery siight sprinkling,-that I am necessarily compelled to exercise all the caution with which I have been endowed. However, as the whirlpool of Wednesday did not disgorge me from the occan of shall be able to remain incognito. My only object in doing this is to keep up the excitement and continue the innodiminished if the author was known.

Miss Mary Hyslop is still the cyno; sure of many eyes, and the heaven of many hearts, where numberless young men indulge the fond hope that they have hald up their treasures, "where neither moth or rust can corrupt, and where this yes cannot break through or steal." Time will reveal all things, therefore we must all exercise that christian virtue, patience.

One of the most interesting young la dies, Miss Helen Bennet, of St. Louis, has just left for Europe, where she will remain two years to complete her education. She waltzes beautifully, and is as graceful as a fawn. She is a young lady of remarkable intelligence and is destined to be an ornament to society. Her mother is one of the most pleasing ladies at the house. Mr. Bennett is a high-minded and very agreeawith ladies and gentlemen.

As I said in my last letter, there is an expression in the face of the elder Miss Hall, which has ever had a peculiar charm for me. It is not merely beauty, but amiability, goodness and sterling decision of character, which always make the possessor a treasure of inestimable value. Her devotion to music and her accomplishment in it, plainly indicate that she has a soul of rare worth. Wallace, the celebrated composer, has just published "The World's Fair Polka," an admirable thing, which is dedibated to the charming Miss Hall.

Among the visitors here I frequently notice Miss Camilla Scott, the beautiful daughter of the honored and distinguished General. She is a decided belle, and receives unbounded attention; she is very beautiful and accomplished, and her powers of fascination are rare indecd.

I also notice Mrs. Barclay, of Baltimore, formerly Miss Douglass, a wellknown belle; she recieves as much attention and is as much admired as ever although she does not mingle so exten sively in all the gayety as formerly,
